The authors of this manuscript analyzed the history of organization, its staff members and the results of the research the Kazakh society under F.A. Shcherbina expedition in the late XIX and the beginning of XX centuries in Kazakh steppes. Although, the expedition results were used in scientific researches as historical data, it was never considered in complex. So, the authors make conclusions about the first steps in the research organization, its main methods, information capacity and data fidelity.

This manuscript is of great use for historians, those who are interested in humanitarian sciences, students of History faculties in Higher institutions, post-graduate students, and all concerned.
